To Whom It May Concern:

I have had the pleasure of working closely with Chad Brennan and initiatives of Renew for the past two years. I have had an opportunity to view the growth and development of Renew as an organization in its mission, vision and purpose.

It is exciting to note that Renew is providing a much needed service in the broader Christian community: that of Unity. So often organizations are wrapped up in their own projects and tasks and Renew seems to be a catalytic movement that is devoted and committed to creating synergy amongst various groups. I believe this has already resulted in fruitful partnerships, productive conversations and many growth curves for communities in this city.

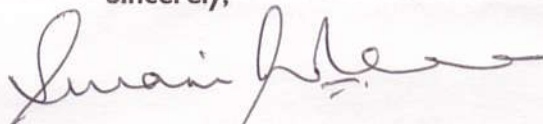

In particular for InterVarsity, Renew has provided us with a host of various other artistic talent that have been working in this area which we have been unaware of. This has added to InterVarsity's multiethnic vision greatly and we have been able to use the arts more effectively as a result of Renew's services.

The Renew staff are to be committed to partnership without seeking to usurp the main goals of each organization that they partner with. This reflects a maturity and grace that characterizes each of the staff members.

I have personally been motivated and encouraged by the campus ministries prayer group that is organized by Renew and the various generous dialogues that have resulted from these interactions.

I continue to remain glad for their impact on campus and it with pleasure I recommend them for your considerations.

Sincerely,

Sriram Sridharan
